question

Is there any conflict between the country's national security and privacy? discuss?

Yes there is.

National Security requires full knowledge of every movement every citizen makes, where the citizen goes, who he meets, who he talks to over the phone, who he messages, where he works, where he studies, where his family lives, how much money he's receiving from outside sources, and so on.

And all of the points mentioned above violate a person's privacy
